

A Different Peter

Peter was the top student in school. He always got full marks in the tests and examinations. But he was proud and selfish. He always looked down on others. One day, Peter's classmates, Tim asked Peter, 'Hey, Peter! Can you teach me how to do the homework?' However, Peter ignored Tim and walked away. Tim was disappointed and angry.

Unluckily, Peter had an accident on his way home. A car crashed into him. He was lying on the ground. He was not moving. Someone called the police. Peter was sent to a hospital at once.

Peter broke his arm. When he was lying in bed in the hospital, his dad cried. Peter's dad sobbed, 'The doctor said you have to stay in the hospital for a month.' Peter was desperate. He worried about his academic performance would be affected.

When Peter was staying in the hospital, his classmates visited him every day. Peter's classmates helped Peter with the homework. They even jotted down some notes for Peter. Peter was touched and he felt sorry for what he did to his classmates in the past.

After this incident, Peter promised he would be kind and helped his classmates with their homework. And he would never be too proud of himself.

The Youth Group That I Joined

I have joined the Cubs for 3 years. I joined the Cubs because I wanted to go camping with my school mates.

Last year, the Cubs held several activities. I took part in some of them, such as going camping, selling flags and visiting an elderly home.

The first activity that I joined was camping. We had an orienteering race, too. A student did not feel well when we were listening to the instructions before the orienteering race. Luckily, she felt better afterwards. Then the teacher gave each group a map. When I was reading the map, another group member got a compass. At night, we built a campfire. We sat by the fire and sang songs. It was a wonderful night.

I also took part in flags selling. First, a teacher passed out the money bags. When I were listening to the instructions, the others got the stickers. After that, we all walked to the streets. We were so cheerful. The people were so generous. We raised lots of money for the charity. What a meaningful activity!

I visited an elderly home in summer. We wanted to accompany the lonely elderly. We performed an amazing magic show for them. Moreover, we chatted with them and cheered them up. They enjoyed the day with us very much.

I became cooperative and more independent by joining the Cubs. What's more, selling flags was my favourite activity throughout the year!
